

2026 Brand Guidelines

Job*W*hisper

This guide defines how Jobwhisper should look, sound, and behave across product, marketing, social, and support. Jobwhisper is a performance brand: sharp, calm, useful, and built for the moment an interview question arrives.

The Logo

The Jobwhisper logo represents live interview support: a wordmark built around confidence, clarity, and motion.

A large, white, serif capital letter 'J' is centered on a blue background. The letter is bold and has a classic, slightly ornate design with a curved bottom.

Clear Space

The clear space around the Jobwhisper wordmark equals the height of the wordmark's main stroke. This is the minimum uninterrupted area required around the logo.

Dos & Don'ts

Use white on primary blue.

Use black on light backgrounds.

Use blue on light backgrounds.

Use white on images/videos

Do not recolor the logo outside the approved palette.

Do not add strokes, shadows, glows, or outlines.

Do not stretch, skew, rotate, or compress the mark.

Do not rewrite or rebuild the wordmark in another font.

Clear Space

Jobwhisper can be paired with product, campaign, or feature descriptors when clarity matters. Use horizontal lockups for web headers and wide placements.

Use vertical lockups when space is narrow or when the descriptor needs stronger emphasis. Keep spacing consistent so the wordmark remains the hero.

The Monogram w

App icon and social avatar

For consistency, the monogram is always centered within app icons and social avatars. Keep contrast high and the mark simple.

Clear Space

White background

Use primary blue on white or off-white backgrounds. This is the default treatment for product, documentation, and partner decks.

Monogram over red

Use white over high-saturation brand color. Reserve this treatment for launch, campaign, and social moments.

Monogram over imagery

Use the monogram only over quiet image areas or inside a solid holding shape. Do not place it over faces, text, or busy interface details.

Colors

Jobwhisper's color system is built around Primary Blue: a signal of trust, clarity, and forward motion. Secondary colors support live assistance, completion, attention, and readable product surfaces.

Primary Colors

Primary Blue is the main brand color. Use it for hero fields, logo applications, active states, and high-confidence moments.

Blue Shades

Blue shades create depth inside the system.

Use darker blues for focus and authority, brighter blues for action, and lighter blues for supportive surfaces.

Type Set

Jobwhisper's type system balances authority and warmth. Display type should feel memorable and editorial. Text type should stay clear, readable, and calm under pressure.

The system should work across brand pages, product UI, social posts, pitch decks, and interview recap screens.

Gowun Batang

Resumé

Gowun Batang gives Jobwhisper a human, editorial voice. Use it for emotional campaign lines, resume-focused moments, and larger brand statements where warmth matters.

Keep it short. This face works best when the message has room to breathe. Best for Numbers, AI replies, Quotes, or Emphasis.

Rethink Sans

Copilot

Rethink Sans carries the product voice. Use it for interface copy, body text, setup flows, labels, and practical guidance.

It should feel clean, modern, and easy to read when the candidate is moving quickly.

Icons and Illustrations

Icons should make the product easier to understand at a glance. Use simple, rounded line icons for setup, resume, job description, microphone, interview, answer structure, notes, and follow-up.

Illustrations should clarify a state or workflow. They should not feel like decoration added after the fact.

Guidance

Keep icons consistent in stroke, corner radius, and optical size.

Use filled icons only for active states, completed states, or high-priority product moments.

Guidance

Illustrations should be minimal, functional, and product-adjacent. Use them to explain setup steps, empty states, and progress moments.

Avoid generic character art when a product screen, question card, or workflow diagram would explain the idea faster.

Imagery

Jobwhisper imagery should show the real context of interview performance: preparation, video calls, focused candidates, resumes, job descriptions, and the live question moment.

Images should feel observant and specific. Avoid stock-like confidence poses, forced smiles, and scenes that make the candidate look helpless.

Qualified, just searching for the next role

Show candidates who are capable, prepared, and actively looking for better opportunities. The tone should be thoughtful, not desperate. Use quiet workplace scenes, laptops, notes, resumes, and authentic interview preparation.

Their dream is to work at bigger companies

Use architecture and workplace imagery to express ambition, scale, and possibility.

Big-company visuals should feel aspirational, not intimidating.

Pair these images with copy about readiness, preparation, and clearer communication. Also, try to keep it blue.

Jobwhisper helped them show up prepared

Use success imagery carefully. Jobwhisper can help candidates prepare, structure answers, and communicate better, but the brand should not promise hiring outcomes. The emotional result is confidence: I know where my answer should go.

Brand Tone

Jobwhisper speaks with the calm confidence of an interview coach who knows the stakes. The voice is direct, supportive, practical, and honest.

The brand should make the candidate feel more capable without making the interview feel fake or automated.

Culturally Sound

Jobwhisper is built for candidates across countries, accents, industries, education paths, and career stages. Our copy should never assume there is only one correct way to sound professional.

The cultural position is simple: people should not lose opportunities because interview pressure makes their thinking harder to express. Jobwhisper helps candidates organize what they already know, connect their resume to the role, and answer with clarity.

Copy principle: Respect the candidate first. Then explain the tool. Do not shame people for being nervous, quiet, foreign, inexperienced, or unsure.

Use this language: "Bring your experience into the interview with more structure." "Answer with the context already in front of you." "Stay clear when the pressure rises."

Avoid this language: "Fix your accent." "Let AI answer for you." "Never fail an interview again."

Audience Portrait

Jobwhisper is for people who have earned the interview and want to perform better inside it: graduates, experienced professionals, career switchers, international candidates, remote-job seekers, and people preparing for bigger roles.

They are not lazy. They are not trying to cheat. They are often qualified, prepared, and ambitious. What they need is structure when the pressure is live.

Audience tension: They know their experience, but interviews make it hard to choose the right story, shape the answer, and sound clear immediately.

What they need to hear: “You already have the experience. Jobwhisper helps you connect it to the question.”

What they should feel: Prepared, steadier, sharper, and more in control.

Emotional Core

The emotional core of Jobwhisper is the moment after an interview when the better answer finally arrives: "I should have said that."

Jobwhisper exists to move that clarity into the interview itself. It brings resume context, role context, and answer structure into the moment when the candidate needs them most.

Copy principle: Lead with the human tension before the feature. The story is not "AI suggestions." The story is clearer answers under pressure.

Core emotional truth: Most candidates do not need a fake answer. They need the right thread to pull from their own experience.

How this shows up in copy: Start with pressure, move to clarity, end with action.

Example message: "When the question changes, your preparation should not disappear."

Messaging Pillars

Pillar 1: Qualified is not the same as ready in the moment.

Use this when explaining why interview support matters. The gap is not talent. The gap is turning experience into a clear answer under pressure.

Pillar 2: The right context should be ready before the question arrives.

Use this for setup, onboarding, resume upload, role details, and product education. Preparation should feel lighter and more useful.

Pillar 3: Real-time support should help you communicate your own experience.

Use this for trust copy, FAQs, product messages, and places where people might misunderstand the product. Jobwhisper supports the candidate. It does not replace them.

Pillar 4: Your resume opened the door; your answers carry the conversation.

Use this for website sections, emails, social posts, and landing pages. It connects preparation to performance.

Pillar 5: No fake promises. No generic answers. Just clearer interview performance.

Use this anywhere the message needs credibility. Do not promise offers. Promise clearer structure, better recall, stronger follow-up, and more composed delivery.

How to use the pillars: Website and landing pages should lead with Pillars 1, 2, and 4. Product messages should lean on Pillars 2 and 3. Trust pages and FAQs should include Pillars 3 and 5.

Tone of Voice

We are: Clear, composed, useful, honest, specific, supportive, and quietly confident.

We are not: Gimmicky, fear-based, robotic, overpromising, condescending, vague, or loud for the sake of attention.

Jobwhisper should sound like the person who helps you slow down, find the point, and answer with confidence. The voice is not hype, motivational fluff, or cold software language.

Channel guidance: Newsletters can be reflective and useful. Websites should be direct and benefit-led. Landing pages should be focused and conversion-aware. Product messages should be short, calm, and action-oriented.

Tone rule: Respect the stakes of interviewing. Do not joke about failure, exaggerate fear, or make Jobwhisper sound magical.

Write like this: "Upload your resume so Jobwhisper can connect your experience to the role." "Your recap is ready. Review key questions, strong answers, and follow-up notes." "You do not need a perfect script. You need a clear direction for the answer."

Do not write like this: "Crush every interview." "Let AI do the talking." "Never fail an interview again." "Hack your way into your dream job."

Voice rule: If the sentence makes the candidate feel smaller, rewrite it. If it makes Jobwhisper sound like it replaces the candidate, rewrite it. If it promises an outcome we cannot control, rewrite it.

Core Messaging Bank

One line: Jobwhisper helps candidates answer live interview questions with clearer structure, stronger context, and calmer delivery.

Product promise: Bring your resume, role details, and preparation into the interview moment so your answers stay focused under pressure.

Landing page hero: The real-time interview copilot for candidates who are qualified, prepared, and ready to answer better.

CTA: Start your next interview with Jobwhisper

Secondary CTA: See how Jobwhisper works

Short social line: Your resume opened the door. Your answers carry the conversation.

Credibility line: Jobwhisper supports preparation and communication. It does not promise hiring outcomes.

Words to Use

Jobwhisper, resume, interview copilot, live support, answer structure, preparation, follow-up notes, interview recap, candidate, role details

Words to Avoid

resume alternatives, hiring guarantees, fake answers, cheating, auto-apply bot, unrelated finance language, legacy placeholders, generic AI assistant.

Mood Boards

Mood boards should combine product clarity with interview pressure: video-call frames, resume details, question cards, structured notes, confident candidates, and sharp blue, black, and red compositions.

The world should feel focused and current, not corporate stock.
